Smart Cities with Green Energy, Smart Transportation, IoT and Big Data

Smart cities gather and report their data in formats that people can understand and use to make city life better. Smart City data will help everyone to overcome conflicts and to work together more effectively.

Smart Cities empower smart citizens and urban organizations to create resilient, enjoyable and continually improving urban life experiences.

The Smart City Standard (ISO 37120) is an integrated suite of 100 international standards for sustainable community development that are indicators for city services and quality of life.

These evolving ISO standard indicators help people and organizations to work together with shared measurements of their progress without passing judgments.

Thus cities can use the standards to compare their past, present and future performance and compare with other cities while taking into account the differences that make each city special for its citizens.

The ISO standard will continue to evolve as cities become ever smarter. Cities today produce more data in 2 years than the produced in the previous 200 years! We must learn to use this data more effectively.

Smart Cities work toward a broad, integrated approach to improving the efficiency of city operations, the quality of life for its citizens and growing their local economy
